ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A network connection platform receives a transaction from a remote device. In response to the transaction, the network connection platform generates a transaction request that causes at least one or more applications to run on a computing device. The network connection platform retrieves data from at least one application and transmits the data to the remote device.